Bach, Goldberg Variations. With the battle to gain recognition as tough as it is, nobody should blame any artist with a tale of triumph over adversity for telling it. Yet the liner notes to van Bloss's debut avoid specific reference to his condition (a television documentary told of his Tourette's in 2007), and his account of the Goldberg Variations is very good indeed: fresh, but cogent and ...

J.S. Bach Goldberg Variations by Nick van Bloss, Johann ...

Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750) - virtuoso organist and composer of a wealth of orchestral, chamber and vocal music - is one of the most influential composers ever to have lived, one whose works form an established part of the repertoire of every instrument for which he wrote. This collection comprises the Goldberg Variations BWV988, a composition that takes its name from a young pupil of Bach, Johann Gottlieb Goldberg, who was in the service of Count von Keyserlingk.

Joanna McGregor's new recording of Bach's Goldberg Variations has a rather hard piano tone in the middle and treble registers coupled with a strange muffled resonance in the bass. This, together with Ms McGregor's generally over-emphatic style, makes for an unpleasant sonic experience.

The Britten Sinfonia's Associate Leader, Thomas Gould directs the ensemble in Dmitry Sitkovetsky's beautifully realised and heartfelt arrangement for strings of Bach's great keyboard work, 'The Goldberg Variations'. Sitkovetsky's arrangement (first conceived for string trio and later expanded for string orchestra), made in 1985 on the 300th anniversary of Bach's birth, is lovingly and painstakingly done.

Nick van Bloss's playing of the Goldberg Variations is superb. After listening obsessively to both the 1955 and later recording by Gould, I now listen to the Nick van Bloss recording almost exclusively. His playing has beautiful clarity, energy and delicacy.
