A venerable father - someone you would be indebted to forever. Read it and don't believe - this is a no holes barred roller-coaster ride about the monastic life. I just wish there could be similar books about other Thai masters like Ajahn Lee or Ajahn Tate, some of these monks described or seem to have described meditation in a more intellectual context than Ajahn Chah.

This is the story of Varapanyo Bhikkhu (Paul Breiter) and his 5 years as a monk with renowned meditation master, Ajahn Chah. Through the stories of his life in this capacity, his relationship to the Buddha, dharma and sangha unfolds. Ajahn Chah comes across as the eponymous venerable father in many regards.

Venerable Father is as close as any of us will come to Ajahn Chah, and we have Paul Breiter to thank for it. I'm incredibly inspired to ordain, even more than before. Scared, too, of course, but living under the Vinaya sounds like a pure and productive way to live.
